Known among children for the title Komache, published by the Sevillian publishing house BABIDI-BÚ, the Sevillian communicator and writer María Graciani returns to the world of storytelling.

This is her second children's novel, Komachita, what a mess of a sister, with which she intends to repeat the success of her previous book, which she has taken to around twenty schools and has reached more than 1,600 children. If in Komache -a mixture of koala and raccoon-, María Graciani emphasised "how cool it is to have personality, emphasising the contribution of originality, kindness and friendship as ways to succeed", in her new book, the author stresses the need for empathy as the glue of relationships, a deep sense of teamwork and solidarity to help improve and the value of forgiveness as the basic nourishment of the heart.
